HOME & SCHOOL CONNECTION

Household elections

An election lets a group of people make a decision, whether it involves citizens electing a major or children choosing student council officers. Show your youngster democracy in action by holding elections in your home.

1. Choose topic. Have your child pick an issue to vote on. It could be practical ("Should we paint the bathroom green or blue?") or fun ("Should we get a fish or a hamster?").
2. Campaign. Each person can campaign for her side, presenting reasons why others should vote her way. You may decide to make posters or give speeches to persuade family members.
3. Create ballots. Let your youngster make a ballot for each family member and get an empty tissue box to put the ballots in.
4. Vote. Select an evening for your election. Cast your votes, and your child can tally them and announce a winner.

Tip: Use this activity as an opportunity to talk about the national elections this month. Take your youngster with you when you vote, explain the choices you make, and watch the results together on election night.
